CAUSE

On 4/19/19, the Probation Office filed a Report on Offender Under Supervision (Form 12A) advising the Court of Ms. Gracia's arrest by the Boston Police for Assault and Battery against her teenage daughter on 4/13/19. Ms. Gracia has proclaimed her innocence and accused her estranged husband of exaggerating her disagreement with the child in an attempt to have her arrested. Ms. Gracia claimed her husband had a motive to do so because she had called the police two days prior and had him arrested for allegedly assaulting her.

Although Ms. Gracia opted not to obtain a restraining order against her husband, due to the parties estranged relationship, she agreed it would be in her best interests to relocate to another residence until her criminal case had been resolved. Thereafter, with no other housing options available to her, Ms. Gracia relocated to her husband's grandmother's home in Roxbury. Despite our office approving the residence for supervision, Ms. Gracia abruptly asked to temporarily move to another address last week due to the ongoing conflict involving her husband. She explained that although she heeded the advice of this Officer to sever all contact with her husband, he apparently was calling his grandmother continuously asking that she be evicted. While the grandmother never told her to leave, Mr. Gracia felt the strain amongst the parties was making her living situation untenable so she decided to move to a friend's house who also resides in Roxbury. Unfortunately, because her friend's apartment is located in subsidized housing, she is prohibited by law from staying more than 30 days. Additionally, while Ms. Gracia remains employed, since she is not working regular full-time hours, she does not have the funds to afford her own place.
